Students enrolled in the PADM 2250 (ie, The Ghana Course) will meet as a group for 3 sessions prior to departure. These will be scheduled once the enrollment for the class is set. There will be some work and preparation necessary prior to departure. These sessions will involve background on Ghana and its food security situation, as well as group research on a specific staple commodity crop in preparation for research on that commodity while in Ghana. The only formal deliverable will be a group presentation and a group paper.

All students may if they desire enroll in PADM 4250? Hunger and Food Security in Global Perspective as a non-credit student. That class meets on Tuesdays, 6:45-8:25, from March 20-May 1. Students would attend lecture and do the readings as possible, but not be responsible for any of the assignments in that class.
