This program gives students the skills and experiences to make a positive impact on the health of communities worldwide. By studying and working in one of the most complex, diverse, and interesting cities in the world, NYU Wagner students experience first-hand the importance of healthcare delivery and health promotion. The degree offers:

- An INTEGRATED APPROACH, where you’ll learn management, finance, and policy, as well as cutting-edge concepts and skills to shape the future of health policy and management.

- An ENGAGED AND INFLUENTIAL FACULTY of leading scholars and practitioners, who encourage you to apply classroom learning to professional experience, and vice versa.

- PRACTICAL TRAINING, through hands-on projects, internship opportunities, and the one-year client-based Capstone project.

READY TO MAKE AN IMPACT

Students graduate with a framework that prepares them for broad career opportunities domestically and worldwide. Alumni work in every sector of the healthcare system, including premier hospitals, healthcare consulting, public health philanthropies and foundations, financial institutions, and government agencies.

“NYU Wagner was my clear first choice for graduate school, with faculty at the forefront of healthcare policy and management, a location in the heart of a city with no less than five world-class health systems, and flexible schedules that allow students to maintain a full-time career.”

- BERNARD ORTEGA, MPA-HPAM Student Project Manager, Mount Sinai Health System
