

NYU WAGNER IN THE MEDIA: AUGUST 2010

Date	Media	Headline	Wagner Source	Discipline	Interview/Excerpt
August 2, 2010		Chelsea Clinton, Mark Mezvinsky Wedding Details: 'Like a Family Wedding'	Chelsea Clinton [student]	Doctoral Program	Marc, 32 (a hedge-fund trader), and Chelsea, 30 (who is now pursuing a PhD at NYU's Wagner School of Public Service), laughed throughout, once when Chelsea seemingly dropped her groom's ring.
August 2, 2010		Chelsea Clinton's Wedding: Partying Till 4:30 a.m.	Chelsea Clinton [student]	Doctoral Program	Chelsea, 30, who starts work on her PhD at New York University's Wagner School of Public Service this fall, and Marc, 32, a hedge funder at G3 Capital, executed some nicely rehearsed moves for their first dance to the Etta James classic "At Last."
August 2, 2010		Warming is Real, Now What?	Rae Zimmerman	Climate Change	"Also at risk is much of the city's critical infrastructure, which sits less than 10 feet above sea level, including the New York entrance to the Holland Tunnel (at 9.5 feet above sea level) and La Guardia Airport (at 6.8 feet above sea level)."
August 2, 2010		Training Next-Generation Cyber Cops	Rae Zimmerman	Civil Infrastructure	To reach beyond a solely technical approach, the program will enlist faculty from NYU's Courant Institute of Mathematical Sciences, Robert F. Wagner Graduate School of Public Service, Leonard N. Stern School of Business, and Steinhardt School.
August 3, 2010		Condé Nast to Move to Skyscraper at Ground Zero	Mitchell Moss	Urban Planning	"We will have the best-paid bankers and best-dressed editors across the street from each other. What young ambitious person would not want to be downtown now?"
August 4, 2010		Questions of Transparency Cloud the Social Innovation Fund	Paul Light	Federal Governance	"In all my years of studying the federal government, its presidential appointees, senior officials, and agencies, the most common mistakes involve appearance, and the most egregious violations of federal law regarding full disclosures have involved the spirit of action, not the fine letter of the law."
August 4, 2010		Trimming Government Bureaucracy: It's the service, stupid [opinion column]	Paul Light	Federal Governance	"President Barack Obama made another important step toward improving federal management this week when he froze presidential appointee bonuses and cash awards."
August 5, 2010		The Republican War on the Constitution	Bob Shrum	Politics	"For a GOP doubling down on a strategy of division and discrimination, the Constitution appears increasingly old and in the way."
August 6, 2010		Diana Furchtgott-Roth: How to Create Jobs	Paul Light	Federal Governance	New York University Professor Paul Light has estimated that this [wage freeze on federal workers], together with the elimination of duplicative programs, could save $1 trillion over 10 years.
August 6, 2010		Condé Nast Plans Move to Ground Zero: Glamour and Fashion at 9/11 Site	Mitchell Moss	Urban Planning	As Mitchell Moss, a professor of urban planning at New York University, told The Times: "We will have the best-paid bankers and best-dressed editors across the street from each other. What young, ambitious person would not want to be downtown now?"
August 8, 2010		Director of the Office of Management and Budget: Who is Jacob Lew?	Jacob Lew	Federal Governance	Lew departed Washington to become executive vice president for operations at New York University, along with serving as a clinical professor of public administration at NYU's Wagner School of Public Service.

August 8, 2010		Wells Hires Cohen for Muni Research	Natalie Cohen [alumna, MPA '79]	Public Finance	Cohen received her B.A. degree from Hampshire College and her M.P.A. degree from New York University's Wagner School of Public Service. She will be based in New York.
August 9, 2010		Harold Ford Jr. Recounts Early Road to Politics	Harold Ford Jr.	Politics	"Politics was ingrained in me early. It was part of me in the best of ways. For my entire life, I've met and heard people, especially other politicians, talk about how they started early in politics by handing out leaflets, brochures, and so on. My start in politics was equally honest — a commercial for my dad on his first congressional campaign."
August 10, 2010		Rangel Takes to House Floor to Respond to Critics	Rogan Kersh	Politics	"Fascinating series of chess moves. Basically Charlie's playing chicken with the House leadership. And he's been at this a lot longer than they have."
August 12, 2010		Obama's Midterm Roadmap	Bob Shrum	Politics	"The president has a case to make. When will he start making it?"
August 13, 2010		Ford Agonistes: There is an ex post facto feel to "More Davids Than Goliaths."	Harold Ford Jr.	Politics	The fact is, Harold Ford Jr., a married man, with one job as a rainmaker for the Merrill Lynch component of Bank of America and another as an adjunct professor on public policy at New York University, is a New Yorker now. He still keeps his hand in the political world, appearing frequently as a commentator on MSNBC and NBC's Meet the Press , and he retains the chairmanship of the right/centrist Democratic Leadership Council, which became his in the aftermath of his 2006 race.
August 26, 2010		What Obama Should do Now	Bob Shrum	Politics	"There are times when picking a fight on principle is also good politics. With the midterm election fast approaching, here's the fight Obama should be waging."