

NYU Wagner In the Media: December 2010

Date	Media	Headline	Wagner Source	Discipline	Interview/Excerpt
Dec. 1, 2010	 VisionSpring	EyeGlasses are a Catalyst for Development - Commentary from Madeline Albright	Malini Krishna (alumna)	International Development	Madeleine Albright is an Honorary Board Member of VisionSpring. She recently spoke with VisionSpring's Malini Krishna to discuss the role of social enterprise and vision care in alleviating poverty.
Dec. 1, 2010	 THE JEWISH DAILY FORWARD	Making Jewish Paychecks Fair	Berman Jewish Policy Archive	Leadership	Just a week before the Paycheck Fairness Act died in the U.S. Senate, we learned that female Jewish communal professionals are paid, on average, $28,000 less than men working in the field, according to data from a new study by the Jewish Communal Service Association and the Berman Jewish Policy Archive. Read more: http://www.forward.com/articles/133560/#ixzz1Akix1joi
Dec. 1, 2010	 Real Estate Kama NEW YORK	NYU Furman Center Quarterly Housing Report Reveals Housing Market Appears to be Stabilizing	Ingrid Ellen	Housing	"Despite reductions in foreclosure filings over last year, more than 10,000 households lived in homes that received a foreclosure notice last quarter."
Dec. 2, 2010	 The Washington Post	Strengthening the Inspectors General [Commentary]	Paul Light	Federal Government	"But the offices will need more staff and a good dose of courage to do the new job, which should include more aggressive reviews of the tepid measures that most agencies use to judge performance."
Dec. 6, 2010	 CITY HALL	Andrew Cuomo Dreams of Electric Cars, but Lacks Clear Funding Stream	Mitchell Moss	State Government	"The governor-elect is clearly on the cutting edge in encouraging this."
Dec. 6, 2010	 Marketplace	The Political Horse Trading Over Tax Cuts and Jobless Benefits	Paul Light	Congress	"The American public hears the word tax increase and that's the only thing they have to hear."
Dec. 8, 2010	 THE JEWISH DAILY FORWARD	Women Continue To Lag Behind In Top Nonprofit Positions and Pay	Berman Jewish Policy Archive	Leadership	That study, of more than 2,000 Jewish communal professionals throughout the United States and Canada, also found that women made up only 12% of the leadership of that much larger group. Women lagged significantly behind men in compensation, earning about $28,000 less.
Dec. 8, 2010	 The New York Times	Bridge and Tunnel Types	Mitchell Moss	Transportation	"A bridge is in the sky; a bridge has poetry — even the ugliest bridge has a following," observed Mitchell L. Moss, director of the Rudin Center for Transportation at New York University. "But a tunnel? A tunnel is much more mechanical. A tunnel is all about moving fast. Tunnels are something you get through, not something you experience."
Dec. 9, 2010	 WSN	The 15 Most Influential Students at NYU	Suhali Bautista [Student]	Leadership	In her six years at NYU, Suhaly Bautista has made something out of her love of nature, creating the "Green Stream" in Goddard and co-founding her own project, the Culture of Creativity.
Dec. 13, 2010	 PR-USA.NET	GoodGirlPR Launches New Non-Profit Division	Danielle A. Henry [Alumnus]	Nonprofit Management	Under this division, not only will we assist companies with becoming more socially responsible through foundation development and cause-related marketing... [It will be headed by] Danielle A. Henry, who holds an MPA in Public and Non Profit Management and Policy with a specialization in General Finance from Wagner.
Dec. 14, 2010	 The Washington Post	What the Next Round of Federal Cuts Should Look Like [Commentary]	Paul Light	Federal Government+E4	"Federal employees are kidding themselves if they believe that President Barack Obama's two-year pay freeze is the last of the cuts in what they're paid and how they work."
Dec. 15, 2010	 The New York Times	Former Prime Minister of Britain Embarks on a Global Opportunity at N.Y.U.	Patrizia Mancini [Student]	International	"I have to say that he seems like a different person. He's way more relaxed. As a politician, he would seem fake when he smiled, but now he seems so natural."
Dec. 15, 2010	 THE Nonprofit QUARTERLY	Back to the Future: Paul Light's Recession Predictions Revisited	Paul Light	Federal Government	"The dynamics are not identical but similar enough to make an educated guess, and my current guess is that I may even have estimated on the low side."
Dec. 21, 2010	 The Washington Post	Government Performance Act Passed, and It's High Time [Commentary]	Paul Light	Federal Government	"Congress may have rushed forward toward adjournment by giving billionaires a refreshing tax break, but it also actually took the time to help good government by upgrading the creaky Government Performance and Results Act. It was high time."

Dec. 27, 2010	THE WALL STREET JOURNAL	Police in About-Face on City Crime Data	Dennis Smith	Public Management	"To be looking at a 10-year display of data across a range of crimes, if there was this concerted effort of downgrading crimes then it would have to show up in some kind of pattern, said Mr. Smith, who conducted a study on grand-larceny versus petite-larceny complaints and found no statistical deviation. "And there is no pattern here."
Dec. 29, 2010	THE DAILY BEAST	How Blizzards Break Politicians	Rogan Kersh	Public Management	"Modern American politics is replete with politicians that have suffered permanently because they had slow reactions to snow, and other weather events. And there are examples when their reputations improved or soared in how they responded to emergencies. It can be really politically profound how they respond to snow."
Dec. 29, 2010	Bloomberg Businessweek	Now Republicans Are Getting Corporate Checks	Rogan Kersh	Congress	"We're in a greatly sped-up political cycle. You want to make sure you're on the radar screen early."